Hello Commissioners,

I'm wondering if it would be possible to create some incentives to help YPD in competing to recruit and retain against other departments who seem to be vying for a limited talent pool of experienced officers.

I've seen incentives being offered by EMU to assist staffers in buying local housing, and I think they accomplish this with a forgivable secondary mortgage which has strings attached (so as to avoid the situation where someone signs up, takes City funding and then changes their plans by resigning or relocating to a diff department -- like what I understand had happened in the past with training sponsorships).

Here's the EMU program which I was thinking we might emulate for YPD:

<https://www.emich.edu/liveypsi/documents/emu.pdf>

I'm not sure if this would be financially feasible for the City, but I had heard that there was funding in the police budget for personnel which haven't been hired yet -- if the funding for extra personnel is there but hadn't been utilized (eg by end of a fiscal period), could it be tapped for something like this which might help attract new personnel and incentivize new and/or current officers to live in our neighborhoods and stick around for a minimum period of time (eg 5 or 10yrs)?

Any feedback, insight, or direction would be appreciated!

Thank you,

--
